A few months before the attack on Pearl Harbor, using training that he received in the military in engine specialist school, he worked as an aircraft mechanic and also farmed on land near Grapevine Lake, raising vegetables, corn, peanuts, hay, and cattle. In the 1960s worked on The Flower Mound Parks Board for seven years. After retirement in 1992 a large portion of his property eventually became Gerault Park. The park, located at 1200 Gerault Road in Flower Mound, named to honor him and his wife.
