Bio Ramon J.

Ramon served in the United States Marine Corps from 2006 to 2011. He joined while still in high school and went to boot camp in San Diego, California. From there he went for training at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Maryland to become an Electro Optical Ordinance Repairman. He repaired and maintained night vision goggles, thermal sights, tank sights, missile guidance systems, and various types of small arms weapon sights.

In 2008 he deployed to Iraq as a machine gunner for Operation Iraqi Freedom 8. and was part of a combat logistics battalion focused on route reconnaissance and convoy security.

He returned home and continued his selected job as a Non-Commissioned Officer training younger Marines, specializing in missile guidance

Ramon was honorably discharged at the end of his enlistment contract in 2011 and began working in the oilfield as an electronics technician.

Today, Ramon is a third-party contractor in multiple Amazon facility across the DFW area.